JUSTIFICATION (including impact on majors, minors, concentrations, and general education courses within the University curriculum; attach additional pages if required)

This change fixes an oversight by the department in its catalog entries. Since the methods courses (formerly HIST 299, and HIST 297-298 going forward) are explicitly designed to prepare students for the major in general and Historical Research (HIST 485 and 486) in particular, placing 299 and 298 as pre-requisites should have been included years before.

Note: We are shifting our 1-semester methods course (HIST 299) to a 2-semester methods course sequence (HIST 297-298) starting in the fall of 2013 as well.

TRANSITION PLAN (describe how will students who are in Catalogs where the course is required for a major be accommodated; attach additional pages if required)

This change is more of a reflection of an existing practice than a change in path for most students; so, students are likely not to be affected. Still, it’s a change that we believe is warranted. The department’s faculty members believe that the pre-requisites should reflect our sense of the methods course as an essential foundation for HIST 485 and 486.

As we transition to only offering HIST 297-298, and after current students who had 299 graduate, we will remove HIST 299 from the prerequisite list as well.
