Effective Date: FALL Semester, Year: Fall 2016

Current Catalog Entry

The evolution of economic systems from political, sociological, and cultural perspectives are examined in order to understand the interactive nature of business, governmental, and societal systems. This course introduces the conceptual foundations necessary to make informed, well-reasoned analyses of the current issues involving an array of organizations from the private, public, and not-for-profit sectors of the economy.

Proposed Catalog Entry

The evolution of economic systems from political, sociological, and cultural perspectives are examined in order to understand the interactive nature of business, governmental, and societal systems. This course introduces the conceptual foundations necessary to make informed, well-reasoned analyses of the current issues involving an array of organizations from the private, public, and not-for-profit sectors of the economy. Students who have declared a major in the College of Business may not register for this course.

JUSTIFICATION (including impact on majors, minors, concentrations, and general education courses within the University curriculum; attach additional pages if required)

BUAD 105 is an introductory survey course in the field of business. Its content is redundant for students who have already completed the core curriculum in a business major. Therefore, we wish to exclude our majors and restrict the class to business minors, prospective majors, and other students with an interest in business.

TRANSITION PLAN (describe how will students who are in Catalogs where the course is required for a major be accommodated; attach additional pages if required)

No transition plan is needed. The course will continue to support prospective business majors, business minors, and students from other departments. The course is not currently required for existing business majors; it does not currently count an upper-level business elective for them; and business majors are free to choose any other course as a free elective.
